DEPARTMENT
CALENDAR

COURSE OUTLINES
&
BIBLIOGRAPHIES
1968 - 69

N O T E

It is not the function of this calendar in any sense whatsoever to substitute for or replace the regulations, information, and instructions contained in the official Sir George Williams University Calendar. The purpose of this guide is to provide the student with descriptions and bibliographies of all courses in the English Department so that on registration he will be able to make an informed choice where his programme permits him a choice. The calendar has been produced in the spring so as to enable students to do some advance reading in the summer in preparation for their courses in the following year.

Note that some of the bibliographies are marked "incomplete": this means that the instructor has not yet decided on further texts. An asterisk attached to a title is a warning that the instructor has not yet decided on the edition he proposes to use: it is safe to read the text but not safe to invest in any particular edition. When not already obvious from the edition, books available in paperback have been marked with a (PB).

This is the first year in which the calendar appears. We hope it will become a regular feature of the department. If you have any suggestions for its improvement I should be glad to have them.

ENGLISH 265.0 A      INTRODUCTION TO EUROPEAN DRAMA      LECTURER: Mr. D. Ketterer
& AA

By a study of representative playwrights and representative plays this course attempts to plot the overall development of drama from Greek times to the present day. However, the approach will be critical rather than historical. In order to give the course a particular focus and because the action of tragedy appears to be linked to the action of history, special attention will be directed to the evolving genre of tragedy.

A grade will be awarded on the basis of two essays and a final examination.

ENGLISH 435.0 B & BB      ENGLISH LITERATURE OF THE ROMANTIC PERIOD

LECTURER: :
Mr. Gerald Auchinachie

The main emphasis of the course will fall on the major Romantic poets; Blake, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley and Keats - their poetry, biography, literary and social criticism. The course also includes some study of the prose of Hazlitt, Lamb and DeQuincey and a brief consideration of the Gothic novel.

William Blake	Selected Poetry and Prose (ed. Frye) (PB)	Modern Library

E. Bernbaum	A Guide Through the Romantic Movement
T. Raipor	The English Romantic Poets: a Guide to Research
Montague Summers	The Gothic Quest

COMMENTS OR SUGGESTIONS:

If a student wishes to prepare a particular author in advance including critical and biographical studies, he will find T. Raipor's The English Romantic Poets: a Guide to Research is a descriptive bibliography. Also recommended is R. H. Foyle (ed.) Goldentree Bibliography - Romantic Poets and Prose Writers. It might be helpful for the student to tackle the prose anthology (ed. Woodring) and the longer poems such as Wordsworth's Prelude and Byron's Don Juan during the summer. The letters of Keats and Byron will also be interesting and helpful.

AMERICAN LITERATURE

LECTURER: Mr. G. D. Sheps

A summary of the development of American literature, looking at the literature of the United States as a record of the imagination of a "new society." American literature is therefore regarded in this course as an entity that in large part is distinct from the tradition of English literature (though by no means wholly so) and which developed its own special structure and concerns. Most of the attention in this course will be concentrated on the "classical" period of the formation of the American literary imagination, i.e. in the 19th century, although there will be some attempt to understand the continuity and modification of that imagination as it meets the 20th century.

AMERICAN LITERATURE

LECTURER: Mr. D. Ketterer

Generally speaking this is a "landmarks" course although an emphasis will be placed on the classic nineteenth century period in American literature. As a result of detailed critical examinations of the individual texts it is hoped that an understanding of the characteristic nature of this body of literature will emerge. For example, all the authors concerned appear to display an epistemological tension between the transcendental and speculative, on the one hand, and the material and prophetic on the other.

A grade will be awarded on the basis of two essays and a final examination.

MODERN EUROPEAN LITERATURE

LECTURER:

Mrs. A. Brune

The intention of this course is to involve the student with significant works of formal excellence and philosophical depth and to enable him to both undergo meaningful existential experience and to arrive at responsible, independent aesthetic judgment by the mastery of techniques of literary analysis. The course is conducted as a dialogue: formal lectures are held to a minimum: class participation is considered a vital part of the process.

Several Plays of Ben Jonson

COMMENTS OR SUGGESTIONS:

Several of the plays will be given particular emphasis. Although the course is a period survey, the plays will be considered as individual art forms, and not simply as preludes and postscripts to Shakespeare. Most of these dramas have merit not sufficiently enjoyed by the critics, and the course will concentrate on discovering the proper appreciation of the particular works.

AESTHETES AND DECADENTS IN FRANCE
AND ENGLAND IN THE 19TH CENTURY

LECTURERS:
Mrs. L. E. MacLean
Mr. M. Verthuy

This experiment in a bi-cultural course is offered to both graduates and undergraduates: Students may read and submit papers in either language, but it is expected that the bulk of the teaching will be in English. Aestheticism and Decadence will be explored as a European phenomenon, with suitable visitors from other departments supplementing the readings in French and English. The music and painting of the period will be used where relevant.

PRESCRIBED TEXTS:

ENGLISH 475.0 A AESTHETIC AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE LECTURER: Mrs. A. Brune
(635) IN LITERATURE

The purpose of this Seminar is to provide an encounter in depth on the borderline where aesthetic and religious experience meet. Significant works, various in their vision of religious reality, but all of considerable formal beauty are contemplated and studied. Discussion will center around these books and take off from there. Visiting participants from The Dialogue Series will be in frequent attendance at the Seminar and "happenings" of all kinds are planned upon and hoped for.

ANGLO-SAXON

LECTURER: Mrs. R.C. Wasserman

The first half of a year's course is devoted to the study of grammar and the reading of simple prose and poetry. By this time the student should have sufficient vocabulary to read easy texts at sight.

The second half of the course consists of an intensive study of Beowulf; philology, grammar, idioms and Anglo-Saxon versification.

PRESCRIBED TEXTS:

STUDIES IN 19TH
CENTURY LITERATURE

LECTURER: Mrs. L.E. MacLean

A reading and/or rereading of the major works of Byron, Keats, and Shelley to assimilate and estimate their total achievement and to locate it in the history of the Romantic movement and of English literature and western literature as a whole. A paper on some aspect of each poet is required of each student for reading in the class, which is conducted seminar style.

...(Cont'd.)....

PREScribed TEXTS:

Oxford Editions of the three poets are recommended but not prescribed.

RECOMMENDED BACKGROUND READING:

An extensive reading list is provided. Background reading depends on the degree of preparation and sophistication of the individual student. Specific reading is determined by the topics of the papers chosen by the individual. Preparing a bibliography is of course part of the assignment.

COMMENTS OR SUGGESTIONS:

Some students are in the course because they wish to write a thesis on a 19th century topic, others because it is a gap in their coverage of the canon. Requirements and assignments therefore differ with each student.

STUDIES IN CANADIAN LITERATURE

LECTURER: M. Gnarowski

This will be a seminar devoted to the study of a group of selected works by Canadian prose writers. The aim of the seminar is to establish basic elements which contributed to, and were part of the rise of modernism in the writing of prose fiction in Canada. Examples to be studied will be taken from the work of E. W. Thomson, Stephen Leacock, Frederick Phillip Grove, Morley Callaghan, Hugh MacLennan, Hugh Garner and several others. Both the short story and novel will be examined.

Note: Some time will be devoted in this seminar to the methodology of Canadian letters.

PREScribed TEXTS: To be announced.
